FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Joint Airborne Troop Board BY MAJ. GEN. W. N. GILLMORE, USA*

IN 1951 the Joint Chiefs of Staff directed the establishment of the Joint Airborne Troop Board. This was done to insure the proper development of the capability of the Armed Forces to participate in this type of joint operation. Its duties are prescribed in "Joint Action Armed Forces" (JAAF), and a charter approved by the Secretary of Defense reiterates these duties and establishes the authority of the Board.

The Department of the Army is charged with providing facilities for maintaining and operating this agency with the Director being an Army officer appointed by, and responsible to, the Chief of Staff, United States Army.

The Joint Airborne Troop Board has the responsibility in connection with joint airborne operations to: develop doctrine and procedures employed by Army and Marine Forces; evaluate joint tactics and techniques; evaluate equipment; evaluate joint training; and review publications covering joint training. The Director of the Board is also the principal advisor to the Chief of Staff, United States Army, on joint airborne matters. Completed projects of the Board with which all Services representatives are in accord are forwarded to the Chief of Staff, United States Army, for promulgation.

Officers from the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps comprise the membership of the Board with the Army, because of its primary responsibility for airborne matters, providing the majority of the membership. A unique feature of the Board and one that provides a valuable working arrangement is the fact that certain members of the Joint Airborne Troop Board also are, in addition, members of the Joint Air Transportation Board, an agency which concerns itself, among other things, with the air transport aspects of joint airborne operations. The Navy and the Marine representatives likewise enjoy this dual membership feature, with the result that a community of interest and effort is obtained. To com-

Youths Reject Service Careers Because Of Lost Rights, Sec. Navy Tells Legion

Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson joined with other top military leaders this week in sounding the need to create and stabilize career attractions for the Armed Forces.

Speaking at the American Legion Convention in St. Louis on 31 Aug., the Navy Secretary presented what possibly may be a preview of the forthcoming recommendations to be made by the Womble Committee on career attractiveness.

He said the Defense Department is faced with a problem of establishing "conditions of employment, tenure, standards of living, and security that will lead a portion of America's talented young men to make the occupational choice of serving as career officers in the military service."

To the man who consecrates himself to the service of his country, he said, "we owe the assurance of a decent and comfortable standard of living not only through his period of active service but in the years of his earned retirement."

He added, "We must recognize that an important part of the serviceman's standard of living provided for in the form of

Top Army Generals Face Realignment

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens will announce shortly—probably within the next two weeks—a reassignment of top Army generals. He will act on recommendations of General Matthew B. Ridgway, Chief of Staff.

At least one, and possibly two four-star officers will be involved. It's a certainty the realignment will affect a number of lieutenant generals and major generals.

Actually, the star-studded shifts began this week when Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, formerly Chief of Information, took over a lieutenant general's billet as Second Army Commander at Ft. Meade, Md. His assignment required the shift of Lt. Gen. I. D. White, corps commander in Korea, to command the Fourth Army at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., instead of the Second, as previously announced.

The major coming assignment is, of course, a replacement for General Mark

AF Given O.K. To Retain 4,000 Non-Regular Officers

Air Force officers who have not already been notified of forthcoming forced release from active duty can be certain of continued service. They are safe from the economy axe.

All Air Force officers being separated involuntarily have now received notification.

This information was made public late this week by Assistant Secretary H. Lee White, Air Force manpower and personnel civilian chief.

His announcement confirmed a prediction in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL that the Defense Department was reviewing manpower cutback plans and as a result there would be fewer force-outs. Mr. White revealed that a previous group of 4000 officers destined for forced separation will be retained in service.

The 4000 officers will be retained notwithstanding the fact that the Air Force still will call to duty 9500 recent ROTC

All Bottles Sold At Messes Must Carry Personal Label Under Strict Control

The Defense Department has adopted a "unified" policy for handling of alcoholic beverages by all Service messes which will result in a personal registration for each bottle sold.

Strict controls are provided in newly released Service regulations—which include one proviso theoretically so stringent that it could make it an offense to offer a guest a drink.

The regulation says that packaged alcoholic beverages by the bottle may be sold "in reasonable quantity limits" and adds that such liquors "under no circumstances are to be sold or given to any other person whatsoever."

(It is known that prior to the release of the new regulations, key Congressional officials were informed of policy plans).

The new order—likely to stir some controversy from varied quarters—provides

JCS Will Order New Reserve Forces Study

The Joint Chiefs of Staff will order a new inquiry into the size and effectiveness of the Reserve Forces of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps on the basis of experiences in Korea and as part of the "new look" at defense requirements.

How many active (paid) Reservists are needed? What kind of units are required, particularly for the first year of conflict? What changes in training programs should be implemented? How much will this cost?

These are some of the questions which confront the new Pentagon leaders.

The results of the Reserve Forces review will have a strong bearing on the number of officers and men eligible for drill pay and summer training status and thus better able to earn sufficient retirement credit points.

Some charges have been made that the Reserve is getting top-heavy with older personnel anxious to stay on until they achieve age 60 and 20 years creditable service—the requisites for retirement pay under Public Law 810.

Conceivably, the Joint Chiefs may recommend increased forced attrition at the top to make room for younger personnel in lower ranks.

Individually, the Service Chiefs already have initiated such studies, but the inescapable need now exists to integrate the separate surveys to insure proper balance among the Reserve elements of the various Armed Forces and as effective and economical a relationship with the size of the Regular Forces as possible.

Return of National Guard, Air National Guard and Reserve units, together with release of scores of thousands of enlisted men with Reserve obligations, has swelled the potential personnel resources for the civilian components.

But Pentagon leaders are frank to admit that no one can say with authority at this time how much of an Active Reserve the United States requires in the light of current world conditions. They say only it must be "vital," whatever the current dilemma about its size.

There is virtually unanimous agreement that the war in Korea has demonstrated the need for steps to vitalize the Reserve. The Armed Forces, particularly the Army, want to avoid if possible the repetition of a situation where thousands of inactive Reservists had to be called to duty, while other thousands of Active Reservists were not used, either because they were not needed or because they could not be summoned except with their units.

New Study of Reserves

The Armed Forces Reserve Act was formulated and passed by Congress with the hope that the muddled Reserve picture would be cleared by the establishment of the Ready and Standby Reserve categories.

Defense officials say that AFRA has helped, but point out that its provisions are weakened in the absence of clear-cut manpower targets for the Reserve Forces.

The new inquiry, which will head up in the Joint Chiefs of Staff on the military side and in the office of Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah—newly returned from the Far East—on the civilian side, will seek essentially to establish the minimum Reserve requirement for the first year of war.

First Year Critical

The first year is the critical period when men and units of the National Guard and Reserve units are most needed. After that, the Active Duty forces are more able to provide the necessary manpower and to train them.

So, it can be anticipated the JCS shortly will spell out in specific terms the minimum mobilization strength needed for the National Guard and the Reserve and also the minimum training requirements for these units.

Aside from the purely military aspect of the prospective review, the Civilian Components study is loaded with potential political repercussions.

There has been talk during recent months, for example, of modifying the missions of some National Guard units, possibly putting a greater emphasis on air defense assignments. If such a policy were followed, it would mean in some States less emphasis on division elements. This would certainly bring a strong reaction.

On the Organized Reserve side, Korea demonstrated that study should be given to the question of individual vs. unit call to active duty.

The Army, as pointed out, wanted very much to call some men as individuals, but was bound to preserve unit integrity of Reserve units. Not a single Reserve division was called to active duty and now there is serious question as to the possibility of eliminating some Reserve division designations.

Air Force Study

The Air Force is known to have this matter under study also. The Commanding General of the Continental Air Command has suggested that in event of war the Air Force possibly would have greater immediate need for individuals as replacements and fillers than units.

In an address made last August to the Air Force Association, Lt. Gen. Leon Johnson said:

"I think and believe that we should train as units wherever this is possible but I don't think that the Air Force should have a fast and hard rule to use those units as such in event of emergency.

"I think it would be a serious mistake to make such commitments," said General Johnson, "because by the time the Reserve forces are called into active service and are being used to replace such units, the equipment situation and the depletion of the Regular units may be such that the Reserve units will have to be used as individuals to immediately take up their share of the burden and assure victory or stave off defeat."

allowances and services." The privilege of shopping in commissary stores and post exchanges, medical care of dependents, and like benefits, he noted, have been used in the calculations which established military pay scales, and any cut in these benefits "invariably affects the standard of living of servicemen everywhere."

We Must "Play Square"

Mr. Anderson noted that the career serviceman "must have the knowledge that his country will play square with him. His real guarantee for his standard of living and the security of his family rest upon the integrity of the terms of the agreement under which he entered the service."

With this in mind, he said, "we should weigh very carefully how we change the rules in the middle of the game. We must give renewed consideration to each proposal that would abrogate a part of the servicemen's standard of living, the terms and provisions of his retirement, or his opportunities for promotion."

The Navy Secretary cited numerous examples to point up the waning interest in military careers. He noted that only 85 of the Navy's first 800 Holloway Plan graduates have elected to stay in the Regular Navy (a condition which was disclosed in THE JOURNAL last April), that the Army lost 80 four-year cadets of a class of 670 through resignations this year; and that applications from distinguished military graduates of the ROTC program have dropped from 81 to 39 per cent in the last five years.

Endorse USAF Academy

He said also that USMA quotas for the Air Force "are being met with difficulty, underscoring the urgent need for an Air Academy." Secretary Anderson said the Air Force Academy is "a project which both the Army and the Navy heartily endorse."

The text of the Secretary's remarks follows:

"It is a genuine pleasure to come here tonight with the opportunity of speaking to you about some things in which we are all interested as patriotic Americans. Your concern for our country's welfare is one of our great assets in the endless effort to achieve a comprehensive understanding by the American people of the elements essential to our national security.

"Today, we universally acknowledge the necessity of a strong and ready military establishment as one of the foundation stones of our security. You have helped in the building of that concept. You are, I know, equally conscious of achieving an atmosphere of economic stability and confidence to support our total effort in time of preparation or in time of war, if we cannot avoid it.

"Dedicated to security, our military establishments must be equal to whatever task it may be called upon to do.

"We must have better, faster, more far-ranging planes than any possible enemy.

"We must have the finest in ships and submarines, equipped with superior electronic detection and fire-control gear.

"Our soldiers and our marines must be better armed and better protected than any which might be sent against them.

"We must be prepared to fight on the land, in the air, on the sea and beneath it with more capability than any other nation on earth.

Need Men of Character

"To implement this objective, above everything else, we need men of the highest quality of character, leadership and technical competence.

"Our Army, Navy, and Air Force will always be no better and no worse than the individuals who comprise them.

"Providing this adequate corps of competent Service personnel is becoming increasingly more difficult. We must be concerned with the probabilities we face tomorrow, in one decade, or for a long unknowable period of time.

"Let us examine some of the realities of our day.

"Under Navy planning, we provide four-year scholarships to promising young men who, at graduation, are obligated to serve three years as officers in the Navy. At the end of three years, they have the option of applying for a Regular Navy commission or of returning to civilian life. Our first-class under this plan paid a dividend of 800 of these young officers and yet only 85 chose to stay in the Regular Navy. Our experience prior to the Korean crisis showed that during the years 1948 and 1949, officer resignations were running at the rate of over 1,200 per year.

"In our Army, 80 fourth-year cadets of a class of 670 resigned this year. Applications from distinguished military graduates of the ROTC program have declined from 81% in 1949 to 39% in 1953. The current quotas of flying volunteers to be furnished by the Military Academy for the Air Force are being met with difficulty, underscoring the urgent need for an Air Academy—a project which both the Army and the Navy heartily endorse.

"Last December, the re-enlistment rate of the Army, according to General Bradley, was 6.1% as against 60% at the beginning of World War II.

"The same basic story is applicable to the Air Force. In this age of supersonic, jet planes operating between thirty and fifty thousand feet, our typical Air Force pilot is thirty-one years old. Not twenty-one, but thirty-one. We fought the air war in Korea largely with the veterans of World War II. How long can we rely on these gallant warriors to be the mainstay of our air effort if a new war cannot be avoided?

Serious Implications

"These conditions contain serious implications for the present; they portend for the future even more desperate possibilities.

"We must begin training this year our generals and admirals of the 1980's. Our leading non-commissioned officers of 1970 are the privates and seamen of today. They are the men who may some day lead your sons in battle. They are the men upon whose courage and judgment the lives of your boys may some day depend. Realizing this, you may ask 'What is wrong with the recruiting conditions of today?'

"What has happened over the past few years to bring about such a fundamental change in the attitude of our young men toward a career in the Armed Services? How do we re-establish the factors which historically led some of the most capable young men of the nation into a lifetime of service to their country, knowing that they likely would never become rich and might very well be called upon to pay for their failures or errors in judgment not only with their lives but with the lives of their brothers in arms?

"First of all, I submit to you that there is the idea of service. Not money, but service. That embraces the opportunity to serve one's country in an office of respect and esteem in the eyes of one's fellowmen. It is the idea that the serviceman 'belongs'; that he represents an indispensable part of his country, which depends upon him, holds him in high regard, appreciates his occupational choice and will call upon him in time of great travail.

"Today, he may well wonder about the place of the military officer in public opinion. All too frequently, the whole broad areas of our officer corps are carelessly referred to in slighting language and with innuendo. All too frequently, general criticism is generated from allegation of individual incapacity, singular misconduct, or baseless rumor. The occasional various misdeeds and shortcomings of individuals are improperly charged by careless language to the group to which they belong.

"To the extent that individuals deserve censure, they should have it. Criticism should be constructive and not destructive. It should not be applied with reckless abandon to segments of our Service when generated by individuals of occasional fault. We should remember that in all of our history, our career Service personnel have never failed their country in time of trial. We should come to appreciate the fact that the overwhelming majority of them are capable, dedicated men and women devoted primarily to the service of our country.

"In the words of the late, great James Forrestal: 'American life is the product of the cohesion, the cooperation and the effort of all these elements—of our statesmen, of our military leaders, of our business men, of labor, of religion. You cannot besmirch any one of them without weakening America.'"

Standard of Living

"Second, there is the matter of a standard of living. No matter how intelligent or industrious a man is, there is positive limitation on the amount of money he can earn in the service of his country. To those men who, through their own choice, renounce the chance of securing great material wealth and who consecrate themselves to the service of their country, we owe the assurance of a decent and comfortable standard of living not only through his period of active service but in the years of his earned retirement.

"We must recognize that an important part of the servicemen's standard of living is provided for in the form of allowances and services which the government has historically provided its military personnel. The privilege of shopping in commissary stores and post exchanges, medical care of dependents, and like benefits figure importantly in the servicemen's standard of living. They have been used in the calculations which established military pay scales and their diminution invariably affects the standard of living of servicemen everywhere.

"Finally, we must secure those entering our military service in the knowledge that we will be faithful in the maintenance of our responsibilities toward them and their families.

"One who enters the military service as a career gives up a number of things. He cannot quit on his own terms. He cannot strike. He cannot bargain individually or collectively with his employer. He cannot choose his own residence. He cannot actively engage in politics. There are important abridgements upon his leisure time.

"He must have the knowledge that his country will play square with him. His real guarantee for his standard of living and the security of his family rest upon the integrity of the terms of the agreement under which he entered the service."

Weigh Rule Changes

"As a consequence, we should weigh very carefully how we change the rules in the middle of the game. We must give renewed consideration to each proposal that would abrogate a part of the servicemen's standards of living, the terms and provisions of his retirement, or his opportunities for promotion. Such changes should never be accomplished in haste without careful hearing or in an effort to correct occasional abuses. Our servicemen must come to believe that while we expect them to keep the terms of their agreement, we, too, will keep the terms of ours.

"I would not have you believe that all of the elements of personal considerations are on the wrong side of the ledger. There are some on the other side as well.

"In recent months, the Survivors' Benefit Bill was passed by Congress giving new security to the officers' dependents; the excellent report of the Moulton Committee on Medical Care for Dependents is receiving the study of the Department of Defense and that of Congress; the recent Congress repealed legislation requiring the reversion of officers in rank and the Van Zandt amendment, which served to preclude the retirement of officers, was modified with the concurrence and assistance of Mr. Van Zandt.

"Our problem resolves itself into the establishment of conditions of employment, tenure, standards of living, and security that will lead a portion of America's talented young men to make the occupational choice of serving as career officers in the military service.

"Toward the achievement of this objective, you gentlemen can do your nation a great service by bringing to your countrymen an understanding of the problems we have discussed this evening and of the things we should do to correct them.

"We must urge care and intellectual honesty in the use of criticism and be sure that it is made to apply only to those who are offenders and not to the gallant men and women who serve our country well. We must assure the serviceman and his leaders a place of dignity and respect in the national community. We must assure him of reasonable security for himself and his family, and a decent and fitting life. We must assure him that his country will keep faith with him and honor its obligations to him. We must generate the atmosphere where the esprit de corps and the will to serve grows constantly stronger for here is the largest single element of our military strength.

"I am confident we will achieve these objectives. I am sure that your influence will be wisely used. In the days to come, we will have new leaders to match the magnificent military leadership with which America has traditionally been blessed."

USNA Flag Lieutenant

Lt. Comdr. Isaac C. Kidd, Jr., USN, has relieved Comdr. Gerald W. Rahill, USN, as Flag Lieutenant to the Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy.

Commander Kidd formerly was commanding officer of the destroyer minesweeper USS Ellyson. A graduate of the Naval Academy Class of 1942, he is the son of the late Rear Adm. Isaac C. Kidd, who was killed in action during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

QM Assn. Sets Meeting

The annual national convention of the Quartermaster Association will be held 1-3 Oct. at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, Baltimore, Md.

Lt. Gen. Williston B. Palmer, Assistant Chief of Staff G-4, Department of the Army, will be among the luncheon speakers 2 Oct. The association's annual awards to the outstanding correspondent and commentator on military affairs will be made at the annual banquet, 2 Oct.

Realign Army Generals

W. Clark, who will retire on 31 Oct. at his own request.

General Clark's successor will be named about 15 Sept. The most likely choice is General John E. Hull, Vice Chief of Staff.

General Hull, 58, has two years to do before he becomes eligible for retirement under the 35 years service and five years in permanent grade provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947. He could, of course, serve longer than that.

A former CG of U. S. Army Forces, Middle Pacific, and Hawaiian Department commander, General Hull was named Deputy Chief of Staff for Administration in January 1951 and on 1 August of that year became Vice Chief of Staff.

When he was not named to succeed General J. Lawton Collins as Army Chief of Staff, there was immediate speculation General Hull would be given a new post.

One possibility was the position of Chief, Army Field Forces at Ft. Monroe, Va., which has been a four-star billet. But Lt. Gen. John Dahlquist, who has been filling the post on an acting basis, last week was named Field Forces Chief as a permanent new duty.

General Clark's command now seems to be the logical choice for General Hull. He would bring to a joint command a wide respect at the highest levels of all the Services.

This is especially significant, since it is no secret that both the Air Force and Navy have been eyeing General Clark's billet with covetous attention.

General O. P. Weyland, USAF, CG of the Far East Air Forces, has been mentioned as a possible choice to succeed General Clark. The Air Force obviously would be pleased by such a development.

General Hull outranks General Weyland considerably. The Army would not be in such favorable position however, if a more junior officer—for example General Maxwell D. Taylor, Eighth Army Commander—were named to succeed General Clark.

General Hull has not held a field command since serving as commander of "Operation Sandstone" which conducted atomic weapons tests at Eniwetok in the Spring of 1948. During the years since that time, he has been denied field commands because his services were needed in such key posts as director of the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group and as a top aide of the Army Chief of Staff.

The top-level changes will not end with appointment of a successor to General Clark.

A new Vice Chief of Staff is expected to be appointed shortly, for if General Hull does not get the Far East Command he will probably take advantage of the same new legislative provision utilized by General Clark and apply for retirement.

Speculation that another high-ranking Pentagon officer is headed for a new post—possibly a four-star field command—was raised this week when it became known that Lt. Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations and Administration, was on leave.

His being away from the Pentagon at this time is particularly noteworthy in view of the fact that General Ridgway has summoned a special meeting of the 21 Army commanders at the Pentagon next week.

Also, it could be anticipated that the Deputy Chief of Staff would be kept close at hand to participate in briefings for the new chief.

Furthermore, General McAuliffe only weeks ago returned from a leave. He may be getting ready for a new job.

Some observers are speculating that General Ridgway may recommend to Secretary Stevens that one of the four-star overseas commanders, possibly General Charles L. Bolte, USAREUR CG, be named Vice Chief of Staff.

General Bolte served as Deputy Chief of Staff for Plans from February 1951 until ordered to Europe for command of the Seventh Army in August 1952. In late 1949 when General Ridgway was Deputy Chief of Staff for Administration, General Bolte was serving as Director of the Plans and Operations Divisions, becoming Assistant Chief of Staff for Operations on 1 March 1950.

Another four-star officer seen as a potential choice for the Vice Chief of Staff post is General Maxwell D. Taylor, Eighth Army commander.

General McAuliffe could be given either of these overseas commands.

This, of course, would make necessary appointment of a new Deputy Chief of Staff. And so on down the line.

SecDef Declares Air Strength Will Grow

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said this week the military budget for fiscal 1955 will "continue to build up the nation's military strength, particularly air power and air defense while at the same time making progress in reducing expenditures."

The Secretary outlined Defense plans at the American Legion Convention in St. Louis on 3 Sept., the same day on which the Air Force announced plans to cut 1,000 planes from its previously approved production schedules.

Most Powerful

Mr. Wilson told the Legionnaires that "the strength of the Air Force is to continue to increase both through an increase in the number of combat wings and through better equipment." He said, "Including naval aviation, I believe we now have the most powerful and effective air force in the world."

The Defense Secretary said the continued build up in military strength and the reductions of expense will be accomplished by "developing new strategic plans and objectives, giving proper weight to new weapons and equipment, and by continuing to make intelligent savings especially through the better organization and utilization of manpower."

Military Careers

He also discussed the need for a program to enhance military careers, a subject which has been explored by all of the top Defense leaders in recent weeks. "We recognize the importance," Mr. Wilson said, "of continuously building up the morale, the efficiency and the effectiveness of all units of our defense activity." He noted that "the tremendous and costly turnover of military personnel" is being studied "from all angles with the purpose of increasing the relative attractiveness of military service so that more young men and women will adopt military service as their careers."

The Secretary said "it will be our constant purpose to see that the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and the Marine Corps are maintained as institutions in which our young men and women can serve with personal satisfaction, with dignity and with the respect of their fellow citizens."

President's Advisor Named Legislative Asst. SecDef

President Eisenhower this week named former U. S. Senator Frederick A. Seaton (R-Nebr.) to be Assistant Secretary of Defense for Legislative Affairs.

Mr. Seaton, 43, is the ninth and last Assistant Secretary of Defense to be named as a result of the Defense Department reorganization.

His recommendations regarding Defense legislation are certain to be influential, for during the Presidential campaign last year he was a top advisor to Mr. Eisenhower.

The fact that he is a prominent newspaper and magazine publisher means that he will bring to his important new post an expert understanding of the public relations aspect of military legislation.

During recent years, there is little question that defense measures suffered on Capitol Hill because of poor presentation.

Capt. Washabaugh Assigned

Capt. W. V. Washabaugh (SC), USN, former Supply and Fiscal Officer at the U. S. Naval Station, New Orleans, La., departed this week for his new duty station as Officer in Charge, Naval Audit Office, New York City. He was relieved by Comdr. T. D. Gatchel (SC), USN, formerly Supply Officer of the submarine tender USS Bushnell and Submarine Squadron 12.

ARMY SELECTION BDS.

The Army will convene selection boards in October to recommend officers for promotions to lieutenant colonel, major and captain.

Zones of consideration have not yet been spelled out, but probably will be appreciable, extending previous dates by from six to 18 months.

The criteria may be announced next week.

USMC Names 12 To BG; One-Third Are Aviators

The President has approved the promotion of 12 Marine Corps officers to brigadier general.

Four of the group already are serving in one-star rank by virtue of previous non-statutory promotion. They are Brigadier Generals Alexander W. Kreiser, Jr., Ion M. Bethel, Nels H. Nelson and David M. Shoup.

The eight colonels who were selected are Thomas G. McFarland, Samuel S. Jack, Henry R. Paige, Joseph W. Earnshaw, Marion L. Dawson, Francis M. McAlister, Alan Shapley and David F. O'Neill.

One-third of the group are Naval Aviators: General Kreiser, recently relieved as Assistant Commander of the 1st Marine Air Wing in Korea, and now en route to new duty at the Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif.; Colonel Jack, Assistant Commander of the 2d Marine Air Wing at Cherry Point, N. C.; Colonel Dawson, Assistant Director of Marine Aviation; and Colonel O'Neill, Commanding Officer of the Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro.

General Bethel was the only SDO officer selected. He is Commanding General of the Marine Corps Depot of Supplies, Philadelphia. The others are assigned as follows:

General Nelson—Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, HQMC.

General Shoup—Fiscal Director of the Marine Corps.

Colonel McFarland—Chief of Staff, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C.

Colonel Paige—Assistant Chief of Staff, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Colonel Earnshaw—Special Assistant to the Director of Personnel, HQMC.

Colonel McAlister—Chief of Staff, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific.

Colonel Shapley—Chief of Staff of the 1st Marine Division in Korea.

Shotgun Attacks Hurt Rapport, Says Ridgway

The vital relationship between the officer corps and enlisted personnel, particularly the non-coms, is being damaged by shotgun criticism of military "brass," General Matthew B. Ridgway declared this week.

Meeting informally with Pentagon newsmen, the Chief of Staff said he was greatly worried over this problem.

He expressed the hope that action would be taken to raise the attractiveness of a military career.

In this connection, General Ridgway said that a preliminary study of the problem indicates that a modest pay raise is justified for military personnel.

Emphasizing that pay is not the entire solution to the problem of Service attractiveness, General Ridgway pointed to medical care for families and threats to the commissary privileges as factors which effect military morale.

General Ridgway recalled that when he was Deputy Chief of Staff before going to Korea to command the Eighth Army, a study showed that items bought for $1 at the commissary would cost $1.23 on the outside. He said he did not yet have comparable figures for current prices.

The Chief of Staff pointed out that military pay through the years has taken into consideration such benefits as commissary and post exchange privileges.

The emphasis which he placed on the problem of Service Attractiveness in chatting with Pentagon reporters demonstrated that General Ridgway will lend energetic support to efforts of the new Joint Chiefs of Staff to boost the prestige and benefits of military service.

Marine Pilot Sets New Altitude Record

An unofficial world's altitude record of almost 16 miles was set on 21 Aug. by Lt. Col. Marion E. Carl, ace Marine Corps test Pilot, in the Navy's rocket-powered D558-II Skyrocket.

The new mark (83,234 feet) was established at Edwards AFB (Muroc), Calif., during tests of a new Navy high-altitude pressure suit. It exceeds a mark of 79,494 feet set two years ago by Bill Bridgeman, also flying the Douglas-built Skyrocket.

The Defense Department said the record flight was made possible by the cooperation of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics which has been using the D558-II's in an intensive program of high altitude and speed research for the past two years.

Within seconds after being dropped from the B-29, the four Reaction Motors rockets which power the aircraft blasted it well past the speed of sound. Colonel Carl's rocket fuel was completely expended by the time he reached 75,000 feet, but his speed carried him on up over 83,000 feet.

Colonel Carl, 37, is Operations Officer at the Marine Corps Air Station, Quantico, Va. One of the most experienced test pilots in the Navy or Marine Corps, he set a world speed record of 650.6 miles per hour (later broken) in August 1947, flying the Douglas Skystreak.

Criticizes Marine Planning

Representative Walter Norblad (R-Ore.) last week criticized Marine Corps promotion plans and asked General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., to explain why the Corps is promoting 22 officers to one and two-star rank.

The House Armed Services Committee member said in a letter to General Shepherd that he thought the promotion of such a large number to general officer rank was not consistent with the present manpower cutbacks. He said both subjects had been brought to his attention through the pages of THE JOURNAL.

Although General Shepherd's reply was not made available either at HQMC or through Representative Norblad's office it was apparent to observers that two facts justify the Marine Corps move.

1—Fiscal '54 promotions to major general and brigadier general constitute the first statutory selections the Corps has made to these two ranks since 1951. Eight of those selected are already serving as general officers.

2—The Marine Corps will lose a relatively small number of officers as a result of the budgetary restrictions which are forcing large cutbacks in officer personnel in the other Services.

To Stress Management Improvement In Army

The Army Management Improvement Program will be carried on during the coming year with renewed vigor and emphasis.

Special emphasis will be given to a proper understanding of the program by all echelons of the command and on the formation and execution of local Management Improvement Programs at every installation throughout the Army Establishment.

Mr. Sol Ruddel, of the Office of the Comptroller of the Army, in a recent presentation to the Army Policy Council, stated that the Army Staff has determined that the following fields of activity will be particularly stressed during the year:

Programming, financial management, personnel management, reserve affairs, contracting, and salvage and disposal.

At the end of the fiscal year, all elements of the Army Establishment will be required to report on their accomplishments in these special fields.

Mr. Ruddel told the Policy Council that while a limited amount of instruction on these subjects has been given in the Army School system in the past, there is a need for more uniform application. For the coming school year definite requirements for this type of instruction have been established. A standardized package of lesson plans and source materials has been prepared. These lesson plans are slanted at giving all officers who attend Army schools a better understanding of the application of good management practices.

Joint Airborne Troop Board

plete the spirit of coordination both Boards are housed in the same building and have identical functional divisions of Doctrine, Training, and Equipment.

In the field of equipment the major accomplishment of the Board has been to further the program to increase air mobility of the Army. In line with the goal of making all units of the Army, except armored, air transportable, the Board has undertaken many individual and separate studies. One of these has resulted in changes in policy as set forth in publications relative to the development and design of new equipment. In other studies the military characteristics for items of equipment under development have been altered to stress the air transportability requirement. An important part of the Board's work in the equipment field is to monitor, and make recommendations, on the characteristics being built into new transport aircraft in order to further the Army's vital interest in the use of aircraft for both the tactical and non-tactical movement of troops and supplies.

Army Air Requirements

With respect to the military characteristics of aircraft, the Board makes no attempt to comment upon aerodynamic design features but confines its efforts to observations on payload, cargo compartment dimensions, landing requirements, and the like, to insure that the aircraft will meet Army requirements. It is hoped that as a result of the Board's work the air mobility capability of the Armed Forces will be appreciably increased in the future.

Insofar as joint training is concerned the efforts of the Board have been directed toward attaining uniformity of training so that the airborne forces of the respective Services will possess a sound basis upon which to engage in joint training. Real progress is being made along these lines with the result that increased benefits should accrue from the expenditure of training hours and dollars. The Board also observes and comments upon the broad aspects of airborne training exercises, especially those designed to test new ideas and techniques such as the recent Exercise TEST DROP and the forthcoming Exercise SKY DROP.

Sound Doctrines

Because of the newness of airborne warfare and the trial-and-error methods that were necessary during World War II, the formulation of sound doctrine for all the aspects of joint airborne operations is a major consideration of the Board. The Board has prepared a concept for the use of airborne forces in future warfare for Service level consideration and methods for the feasibility testing of this concept are now being studied. A current study of importance is directed toward uncovering facts in connection with the use of air lines of communications, either in place of, or in conjunction with, normal ground lines of communication. The tremendous savings possible through the elimination of the vast depot systems and ground installations in the normal communication zone, if it is proven feasible to airlift supplies and materiel from point of manufacture or port terminal direct to the user, can be easily visualized.

Joint doctrinal concepts relative to the effect and to the application of the new weapons that are available with regard to their implications upon joint airborne tactics and techniques have been formulated by the Board. A project which is just now reaching completion has to do with an examination of the education, publications, and training of the forces of all Services involved in joint airborne operations to determine if these matters are fully reflecting JCS approved doctrine so that unified overseas commanders will be provided with properly trained forces.

To summarize, the Joint Airborne Troop Board was formed to explore and develop the fields of doctrine, training and equipment in joint airborne operations. The composition of the Board was designed to guarantee a joint approach to the problems it considered. The objective of the Board was and continues to be to further increase the combat potential of the Armed Forces of the United States through an efficient and effective exploitation of the airborne capability.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Navy Sets Policy For Medical-Dental Careers

Adoption of a new policy designed to make a career in Navy Medicine more attractive to young physicians and dentists, was announced by the Navy Department on 28 Aug.

The new policy provides that the Navy will accept resignations from Medical and Dental Corps officers, U. S. Navy, who are initially appointed in the grade of lieutenant (jg) or lieutenant on or after 7 Aug. 1953 who have served in the Regular component of their corps on active duty for four years. Those officers who do not submit resignations at the expiration of the four-year period will continue as career officers, and any resignation submitted thereafter will be considered in accordance with the then current policy.

PG Training

These officers also become eligible for postgraduate training after completion of one tour of sea or foreign shore duty. In computing the four years of active duty, any time spent in internship, in residency, or other postgraduate training, or any period of obligated service acquired through participation in such training will not be counted.

Commenting on the new policy, Vice Adm. James L. Holloway, Chief of Naval Personnel, said:

"This policy will free young Medical and Dental Corps officers from the feeling that they are captives. As such, it has much merit and will, it is hoped, offset some of the most serious questions in the minds of potential applicants. I hope and believe it will be a boon of the first order to the Medical and Dental Corps of the Navy."

Meritorious Appeal

Rear Adm. Lamont Pugh, Surgeon General of the Navy, said he considers the policy to be "one of the most meritorious appeals ever offered to prospective officers of the Medical and Dental Corps of the Navy. Now it is possible for a young physician or dentist just out of medical or dental school to serve his country—so urgently needing his services—with definite assurance that his resignation will be accepted after four years should he decide to resign his commission."

Asst. Director, Navy NC

Comdr. Ouida A. McCoy, NC, USN, Assistant to the Director of the Navy Nurse Corps, was placed on the retired list of officers of the Navy on 1 Sept, after more than 22 years' active service. She was succeeded this week by Comdr. Anna E. Redding, NC, USN.

Commander McCoy, a native of St. Charles, S. C., attended Winthrop College and was graduated from McLeod Infirmary School of Nursing, Florence, S. C., in 1930. She accepted an appointment in the Navy Nurse Corps on 12 Jan. 1931. During WWII, she served as chief nurse at the Naval Base Hospitals on Espiritu Santo and on Tulagi. She had served as Assistant to the Director of the Navy Nurse Corps since 1 May 1950.

Commander Redding, a native of Pittston, Pa., was graduated from the Mercy Hospital School of Nursing, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in 1929 and she received her B.S. degree in Administration of Hospital Nursing Service from Columbia University Teachers College in 1950. A veteran of over 21 years continuous active service in the Navy Nurse Corps, she served during WWII at Naval hospitals in the South Pacific area.

Personal Labels on Bottles

that every bottle sold at an open mess must be labeled and numbered.

The pertinent regulation (AR 210-65) states that a record of each sale to show the specific purchase of each bottle must be made. It directs that steps be taken to insure that all packaged alcoholic beverages are sold for the personal use of the purchaser only.

The regulation declares also that open messes are "Federal instrumentalities and as such enjoy certain immunity from State taxes." Questions of applicability of taxes will be forwarded through appropriate major commanders to the Department of the Army for decision, the regulation adds.

The regulation authorizes commanders to permit "dispensing of alcoholic beverages by the drink in open messes for consumption on the premises by Armed Forces personnel, their dependents and bona fide guests."

The regulation says in the section under "Scope" that commanders "will encourage abstinence, enforce moderation and punish overindulgence."

Here is the complete text:

1. Purpose.—These regulations govern the handling of alcoholic beverages on Army installations within the continental United States, and the Territories of Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico.

2. Statutory provisions.—Section 6, 1951, amendments to the Universal Military Training and Service Act (65 Stat. 88; 50 U. S. C. Supp. V, App. 473).

3. Scope.—The introduction, sale, possession, and use of alcoholic beverages is authorized on Army installations to the extent and in such manner as the Secretary of the Army may prescribe. The introduction, sale, possession, and use of alcoholic beverages on Army installations will be strictly controlled and supervised. Commanders will encourage abstinence, enforce moderation, and punish overindulgence. This policy shall be affected by the necessary restrictive controls and affirmative measures.

4. General provisions.—a. Major commanders are authorized to permit the following at installations or activities within their respective commands:

(1) The possession and use of alcoholic beverages in quarters other than barracks assigned to enlisted personnel.

(2) The dispensing of alcoholic beverages by the drink in open messes for consumption on the premises by Armed Forces personnel, their dependents, and bona fide guests.

(3) The sale of packaged alcoholic beverages by the bottle to members of the Armed Forces in open messes at installations, in reasonable quantity limits. All packaged liquors so sold are for the personal use of the purchaser only and under no circumstances are to be sold or given to any other person whatsoever.

b. The sale or consumption of alcoholic beverages on board Army aircraft, vessels, or vehicles is prohibited.

5. Sale, possession, and consumption of alcoholic beverages in Army exchanges.—Commanders are authorized to permit the sale, possession, and consumption of malt beverages, which have an alcoholic content of not exceeding 3.2 per cent by weight (considered nonintoxicating), in Army exchanges within the geographical limits of their respective commands. See AR 60-10 and SR 210-55-20.

6. Control measures.—SR 210-65-1 prescribes the specific measures for the control of the sale, possession, transportation, and consumption of alcoholic beverages. These regulations include but are not necessarily limited to provisions for—a. Local establishment of hours for the sale or dispensing of alcoholic beverages.

b. Prohibition of sales or dispensing of intoxicating beverages to persons under 21 years of age.

c. Prohibition of the employment of any person under twenty-one years of age in any capacity involving the sale or dispensing of intoxicating beverages.

d. Prohibition of the sale, possession, and use of alcoholic beverages in service clubs.

e. Prohibition of the sale, possession, and use in Army exchanges of alcoholic beverages in excess of 3.2 per cent by weight.

f. Establishment of a sales control system to provide for—

(1) Labeling and numbering each bottle to identify it as having been sold in a specific Army open mess.

(2) A record of each sale to show the specific purchaser of each bottle.

(3) Insuring that all packaged alcoholic beverages are sold for the personal use of the purchaser only.

7. Taxation.—The provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of the United States apply to the sale of alcoholic beverages on Army installations. Open messes are Federal instrumentalities and as such enjoy certain immunity from State taxes. Questions of the applicability of taxes will be forwarded through the appropriate major commander to the Department of the Army for decision.

Navy Experiments With Miniature Fire Engines

The addition of "miniature" fire trucks at several naval bases and air stations in this country and in French Morocco was announced this week by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and Willys Motors, Inc. The fire-fighting midgets are expected to provide effective protection at low costs.

The chief advantage sought in the new experimental fire engine is ability to negotiate rough terrain to fight forest and brush fires. Nicknamed the "Ranger," it can also be used in the place of the larger, standard "pumper" at outlying bases where it would be uneconomical to assign a major fire truck.

A meeting of minds...TO WIN A WAR BEFORE IT STARTS

THESE MEN ARE DISCUSSING YOUR FUTURE. They know that atomic war is for keeps. They know that tomorrow's defenses against atomic attack must be planned today.

Across the seas, in other lands where freedom is a fiction, other minds are meeting. They know, too, that victory is not merely won... it is planned.

At Convair, planning for tomorrow has priority equal to production for today. While producing the missiles, fighters, and bombers needed today, Convair is engineering the weapons of tomorrow—weapons to win an atomic war the only way it can be won—before it starts.

SAC Gets Responsibility For B-47 Crew Training Program; Cancel 151 Bombers

THE Strategic Air Command is going to take over some training functions in the B-47 program, heretofore the responsibility of the Air Training Command, Air Force officials disclosed this week.

The Air Staff has approved a proposal initiated by SAC to give responsibility to General Curtis E. LeMay's organization for the "marrying" of B-47 Stratojet crews.

B-47 pilots will continue to be trained under supervision of the Air Training Command, it was pointed out, but crews will be assembled and trained on-the-job by SAC.

This disclosure was made in connection with release of details concerning cancellation of contracts for 151 B-47 medium bombers.

Acting Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas and General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, told a press conference on Thursday that some of the cancellations were possible because of changes in the training procedures.

They emphasized that the shift of crew training from the Air Training Command to the Strategic Air Command was not undertaken to save money, but came as a result of a request by SAC.

This means, obviously, that some SAC personnel and aircraft will be diverted for various periods of time from exclusively operational training to the task of training new B-47 crews.

The Air Force leaders said, however, they were certain the additional responsibility would not affect materially the combat effectiveness of SAC B-47 wings.

Mr. Douglas and General Twining said that there were differences of opinion within the Air Force as to whether this mission should be given to SAC or be retained by ATRC.

It was indicated that in event of war, SAC would immediately be forced to give up training functions and that these would then revert to the Air Training Command.

AF Cuts 965 Planes From Procurement Program

The Air Force this week revealed plans for a net reduction of 965 planes—including cancellation of contracts for 151 B-47 Stratojet medium bombers.

Acting Secretary James H. Douglas told reporters that the aircraft, estimated to have a value of about $750,000,000, are surplus to the needs for attainment of a 143-wing Air Force, should that strength be recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and approved by top civilian authorities.

He attributed reduced attrition rates and changes in training procedures as reasons for the revised production schedules.

In addition to the 151 B-47 contract cancellations, the revised program will eliminate four other B-47's scheduled for production but not ordered and 14 RB-47 reconnaissance bombers, also not ordered.

Additionally, the Air Force will eliminate 579 fighter-bomber and day fighters, 66 primary trainers, 1,431 basic trainers and 10 helicopters from previous schedules.

Mr. Douglas emphasized repeatedly that elimination of these aircraft would have no adverse effect on attainment of the 143-wing objective.

In response to inquiries, Under Secretary Douglas said that some of the $750,000,000 conceivably may be reprogrammed during the current fiscal year for other aircraft.

In this regard, he pointed out that the Air Force has upped its orders for the F-100, described as the most advanced day fighter that is ready for production.

The Air Force official conceded that to the extent that all or part of the $750,000,000 was not obligated during the current fiscal year, Air Force new obligation authority requests in Fiscal Year 1955 would be reduced.

Mr. Douglas maintained that the revised schedules result from a normal review by the Air Staff and are not the result of any economy directive. General Twining said also that this was the case. Mr. Douglas said that the changes would have only a "nominal" effect on Air Force expenditures during the current fiscal year.

This is because planes being knocked from the program are "end-of-the-line" production. Consequently, monthly production schedules will not be reduced. Following is the text of Mr. Douglas' prepared statement:

Contrary to reports, the revision of the Air Force program for the procurement of aircraft which was presented to the aircraft manufacturers is not based on any financial policies. There is a net reduction in the aircraft procurement program of a total of 965 aircraft, but the revision does not result from a search for savings.

Revision of the program originated in the Air Staff, as a result of normal re-examination of the extensive Air Force procurement program. Such re-examination must be made almost continuously. The present revisions were worked out by the Air Staff and approved by the Air Force Council and the Chief of Staff some two weeks ago.

The revised program will not adversely affect the delivery of modern aircraft of both bombardment and fighter types required to equip 143 wings, if the force level of 143 wings is reaffirmed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The new program is largely made possible by a reduction of attrition rates in accordance with experience, giving effect to the flying activity scheduled for the current year. It also results from an adjustment of war-time combat attrition rates in some categories to normal rates, and a further change in training procedures involving a shift of responsibility and certain training activities from the Training Command to a combat command.

It should be emphasized that this revision is made possible to a substantial extent by a better experience as regards loss of aircraft and damage resulting from accidents. This is a factor in the reduced requirement for each type affected by the revision of the program.

It is important to state that in the current revision of the program, we have put on order an additional number of the most advanced day fighter that is ready for production—the F-100. This airplane is the first supersonic combat airplane and its rapid

Langley AFB Gets High Speed Refueling System

Refueling facilities that permit ten aircraft to be refueled simultaneously in as many minutes were placed in operation at Langley AFB, Va.

The new system cuts 20 minutes from the time formerly required to refuel individual aircraft, as well as minimizing the use of refueling trucks and other ground equipment.

Part of the Tactical Air Command base's $3,400,000 improvement construction program, the new fuel hydrant system was opened during a brief ceremony presided over by Brig. Gen. Charles D. Jones, USAF, Langley base commander and Col. R. B. Warren, USA, district engineer of the Norfolk District, Corps of Engineers.

Designed to meet the requirements for refueling both jets and conventional aircraft, the system has ten high-speed dispensing hydrants installed on the flight line apron all of which are supplied from underground storage tanks. It is the product of a joint effort between the Air Force and the Army's Corps of Engineers.

The Langley improvement construction program, which is nearing completion, also includes more than 65 acres of concrete parking aprons, the addition of two new 15,000 barrel bulk fuel storage tanks, a new taxi-way and apron lighting system and an alert apron and taxi-way.

Maj. Gen. Barker Honored

Maj. Gen. John DeF. Barker, Deputy Commander of the Air University, was awarded the First Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal on his retirement 31 Aug. at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, Commander, Air University, presented the award at a parade in General Barker's honor.

The citation accompanying the cluster paid tribute to General Barker's superior leadership in planning and directing expansion of the Air University, the educational system of the Air Force, during the last four years.

General Barker's retirement at the age of 56 marked the close of a distinguished 36-year military career. General and Mrs. Barker will reside at Hendersonville, N. C.

PX Personnel Director

The appointment of Mr. Dudley Frank as Director of Personnel, Headquarters Army and Air Force Exchange Service, was announced this week by Maj. Gen. Edward E. White, USAF, Chief of the PX System.

In his position, Mr. Frank will direct the formulation of personnel plans and policies affecting over 20,000 civilian exchange employees. He succeeds Lt. Col. Louis V. Watwood, who has been reassigned by the Air Force.

Mr. Frank comes to the Exchange Service from the National Production Authority where he was Assistant Director of Budget and Management for that organization.

satisfactory development is a great source of satisfaction.

None of the aircraft removed from the program by the revision referred to were under contract with the exception of a number of B-47 medium bombers currently in production at Wichita, Kans.; Marietta, Ga.; and Tulsa, Okla. The reduction of these aircraft under existing contracts amounts to 151 airplanes. This reduction will be spread among the three plants and production has been rescheduled on a basis which will not delay the planned build-up of B-47 wings, but will permit the Air Force a longer re-order capability at all three plants.

It has been mistakenly suggested that the revised program takes defense funds from the Air Force. This is not the case.

graduates during the current fiscal year.

This means that total Air Force officer strength for fiscal year 1954 will be 134,000 instead of the 130,000 mentioned by Defense officials during budget testimony.

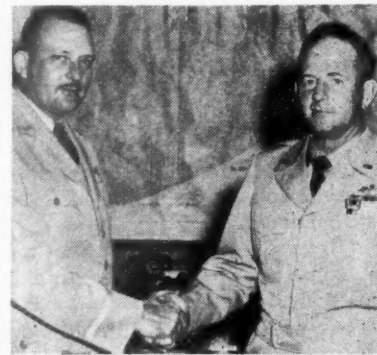

The Air Force has notified about 6500 officers that they are to be separated. Mr. White said 1900 voluntarily requested release.

Money to pay the costs of the 4000 officers who will be retained apparently must come from savings in Air Force personnel expenditures. The end of fighting in Korea will make possible considerable economies in this budget category, Pentagon officials explain.

Mr. White said that the policy has been

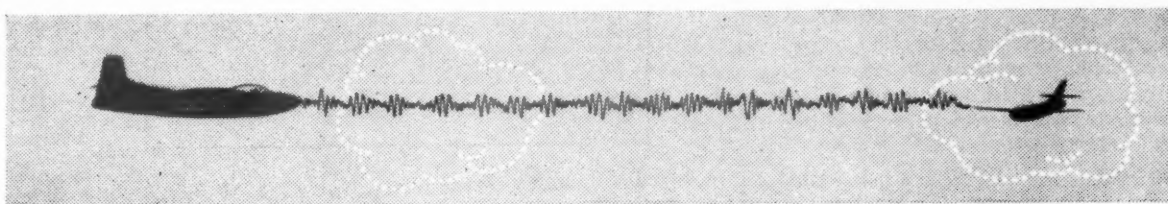

"not to select for separation any essential officers, particularly pilots and technicians." He said commanders are authorized to file appeals on any officer not requesting separation whose services the commanders deem essential to the Air Force.

Designed for the U. S. Navy, the all-weather Skyknight flies at near-sonic

Performance of F3D Skyknight in action is another example of Douglas leadership in aviation. Planes that can be produced in quantity to fly faster and farther with a bigger payload are a basic rule of Douglas design.

"We must assure the serviceman and his leaders a place of dignity and respect in the national community. We must assure him of reasonable security for himself and his family, and a decent and fitting life. We must assure him that his country will keep faith with him and honor its obligations to him."—SECRETARY OF THE NAVY ANDERSON.

Now For Action! Both Secretary of the Navy Anderson and Army Chief of Staff General Ridgway hammered away this week on the damage done by the decline of career attractiveness in the Armed Services. Both were frankly concerned over the gravity of the problem.

Thus, within recent months all the new civilian leaders of the Defense Department and all the new members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff have publicly deplored the loss of rights, privileges and prestige by the uniformed members of the Forces and their families. Certainly, this means more than a new awareness of the problem. It must represent a concerted decision to do something about it.

It was in April—more than four months ago—that President Eisenhower told Congress he had directed the Secretary of Defense to organize a study of the problems of attracting and holding competent career personnel. By now there should be a concrete program and a plan for getting it into effect.

The facts are all in. The Moulton Commission has reported the shortcomings of the present system of medical and dental care for Service families and urged that it be strengthened and broadened. The Strauss Commission recommended a cost-of-living pay increase and reaffirmed the principles of hazard and incentive pays and recommended changes designed to equalize their application. The Womble Committee has long since completed its findings and drafted and re-drafted its report.

Now that Assistant Secretary of Defense Hannah has returned from the Far East there is no longer any reason for delay. The Womble Report should be made public. At the same time the Department of Defense should tell the men and women of the Services and the American people just what sort of a corrective program they will ask Congress to approve.

Having done this, present efforts to impress upon the people and their representatives in Congress the dire need for early action must be continued. Economy and budget-balancing are still watchwords on Capitol hill. The evidence will have to be overwhelming and widely circulated to justify the legislators in making new expenditures in a year of further budget reductions.

The men at the top are concerned and want results. We know this from their speeches and press interviews.

What we must have then is: (1) a concrete program; (2) a continuing campaign of education; and (3) Action!

Which Path? The Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator Styles Bridges (R.-N.H.), who is also a member of the Armed Services Committee, told news reporters this week that Russian possession of both the atomic and hydrogen bombs means that we must reconsider our concept of defense. He said that we should speed up our atomic program, increase our retaliatory striking force and put more emphasis on civilian defense. He expressed a hope that the new members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will expedite the construction of interceptors, fighters and guided missiles.

On another tack, he said he sees a chance to balance the budget in the next fiscal year. The Administration, he said, is really going to cut down on estimates. The Senator added that major reductions must come in defense and foreign aid spending.

It's going to be hard to do both of these things—to build stronger defenses against the Russian threat, to speed production of costly and complicated weapons, and at the same time make further cuts in defense funds.

The dilemma the Senator places himself in is the one which faces the country: shall we tailor our military strength to our military needs or to budgetary ceilings?

How to Drive Men Out. Evidence of the effect of the Bureau of the Budget's edict on Service rentals came this week with the announcement that rents and utility costs for Navy enlisted personnel in the Potomac River Naval Command will be boosted from five to 30 per cent the first of next month.

The Bureau of the Budget last July ordered that enlisted men and women who occupy housing owned or operated by the Navy Department throughout the United States must pay rates comparable to those charged by private owners.

Hitherto, rents in the Potomac River Command, for example, had been prorated on the basis of the sailor's ability to pay and the type of housing he had been given. Now the Bureau of the Budget says, in effect, "charge them what they would have to pay outside."

This wouldn't be so bad if they were paid on the same basis as if they were outside. But their pay scale goes back to the days when government quarters were generally furnished. If not, they were given a rental allowance comparable to the scale of rates which was then much lower than today.

But now we find the Government exacting more from the sailors than it gives them for rental allowance. In cold logic, they should be given more money or be charged less rent.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—President Roosevelt nominates Dwight D. Eisenhower for permanent promotion from lieutenant colonel to major general. He is now a general in the Army of the United States. General Eisenhower thus becomes the third general officer to receive a permanent line promotion since the beginning of the war, the other two having been the late Maj. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee and General H. H. Arnold.

50 Years Ago—The President's course in ordering our European squadron to Beirut, Syria, has provoked the earnest displeasure of Berlin newspapers. American warships are there solely to see that nobody interferes with American interests, and when Admiral Cotton receives satisfactory assurances he doubtless will sail away.

90 Years Ago—When Col. Serrell was mounting the "Marsh Angle" on Morris Island, a lieutenant reported to him that the mud was over the heads of the men and the gun could not be mounted. The colonel insisted that it could, and directed the officer to make requisition for whatever was needed. The lieutenant immediately made a formal requisition as follows: "I want 20 men 18 feet long to cross a swamp 15 feet deep." The joke caused the arrest of the joker for disrespect to his superior officer.

Green Card for AUS

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
I am happy to read your article, which was also given much space in local papers, concerning the subcommittee report on post exchanges.

It was of interest to me to note that agents made use of the red identification card which was not supposed to be honored in exchanges. This places those of us who are retired in advanced grades, from warrant and NCO grades, in an embarrassing situation as we are issued red cards with AUS RETIRED superimposed thereon. Many of us have had trouble at exchanges and when seeking hospital treatment and it has sometimes been necessary to carry the general order ordering retirement to establish one's status. The "AUS Retired" doesn't mean a thing to a clerk, the card being red.

I have suggested that we be issued a green card with AUS superimposed thereon inasmuch as most of us have spent the greater part of our lives in the regular services. I have been advised that we could have a green card, enlisted, to show our regular service enlisted retired status, prior to advancement. But I, and my comrades, feel that we are entitled by our very service, as well as act of the Congress, to officer status when reporting to a hospital, visiting a post, etc. I feel certain that the Department will adjust this in time.

Those of us who were temporary officers in World War I were given retired certificates in the "Regular Army" (courtesy) and it appears to me that it would be a simple matter to superimpose AUS on a Regular Army card thus keeping the distinction between classes of officers, rather than to give us a Reserve Corps card.

We are neither fish nor fowl!
FILIPUS NULLIUS.

Competition For Personnel

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
Your "Letters To The Editor" column is just about the only effective means available to the career officer to sound off on military service as it exists today. To the casual reader, the letters published therein may appear to be nothing more than a series of gripes. In the long run, however, objective review of these letters as a whole provides a valuable source of guidance to military and Congressional policy makers. Therefore, I wish to make a few comments concerning the current controversy over the emoluments of a career in the military forces of the United States under present conditions.

Some of the factors which influenced me to accept a Regular Army commission back in 1947 no longer exist. On the other hand, I am grateful for the promotion I have received since that time. In the interim, I have been reasonably satisfied with my lot and have made no attempt to find out whether I could land a civilian job which would pay enough to lure me away from the Army. Judging from recent letters you have published on this subject, there are at least a few officers who believe that they would be better off as civilians if they were permitted to resign from the Services.

It seems to me that the only realistic approach to this problem would be to permit all persons meeting draft service requirements to resign at will. This would place the Government in a more equitable position in relation to private industry when competing for career personnel. It would also force those professing to have $15,000 per year jobs awaiting them on the "outside" to put up or shut up. If the volume of resignations under such conditions should become large enough, Congress would presumably be forced to act, which is apparently what most of us hope to achieve by writing letters to the editor.

Navy Again Delays Wave Promotions; Women Look To Career Study For Help

The Navy said this week that no selection board will be convened during the current fiscal year for promotion of Wave officers to the grade of commander.

The decision marks the third time in the five years since passage of the Women's Armed Services Integration Act that the Navy has taken action to delay Wave promotions to higher grade in the Regular Line.

It means, also, that no board will be convened during fiscal '54 for the promotion of Regular Wave Line officers to the grade of lieutenant commander unless vacancies are created in that rank through some means other than the normal promotion flow.

Earlier, THE JOURNAL was advised by a Bureau of Naval Personnel spokesman that a board to name Wave commanders would be convened next Spring. This week, the Bureau stated that "promotion of women officers to the grade of commander is not now necessary to meet service requirements."

Look To See Hannah

Wave officers who have been responsible for building the women's arm of the Navy into an effective organization believe, however, that promotions in the higher ranks are absolutely essential if the "sagging" morale of women in lower grades is to be restored to a healthy tone.

They note that the Defense Department is now completing a study which will attempt to correct the numerous obstacles which are blocking career attractions and they are hopeful that Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah will take a close look at the Regular Wave promotion program. They point out that the area is one in which the Navy itself could act to improve career opportunities without further recourse to Congress.

Since the summer of 1948, when the Integration Act was passed, the Navy has selected only six women for promotion to commander in the Regular Line. Four were selected in 1949 and two were selected last year. No boards were convened in 1950 or 1951.

Less Than Two Per Cent

One of the officers selected in 1949 has since retired and another currently is serving in the rank of captain as Director of the Waves. Thus, only four Regular Wave Line officers are now on duty in the rank of commander.

The Navy said this number is "adequate to meet the billet requirements for women in that grade."

The present number of Wave commanders is less than two per cent of the total number of Regular Line Wave officers, although the Integration Act provides that the Navy can have 10 per cent (26 under present strength figures) serving in that rank.

All of the other Services have higher percentages than the Navy. The Air Force has 39 lieutenant colonels, the Army has 24, and the Marine Corps normally has at least two.

Stagnation Results

Observers have pointed out that the Navy's policy of holding down Wave promotions to commander results in stagnation in the lower ranks. This is borne out by the fact that no promotions can be made from the rank of lieutenant as a result of the restrictive policy.

The policy also blocks advancement within the active duty Reserve ranks and in the Regular Staff Corps, since promotions for both of these groups are predicated on promotions in the Regular Line.

The Navy said "Although there are vacancies in the number of women commanders authorized by law, filling of these vacancies at the present time instead of providing an equitable promotion flow, will have the opposite effect in that it will preclude equality of opportunity among later year groups."

Wave officers believe, on the other hand, that the present policy discriminates against the early year groups, and that delay will not solve the problem but instead will afford only continued aggravation.

In explanation of its position, the Navy said "Women currently serving in the grade of commander are approximately a year and one-half ahead of their male contemporaries."

19 Are Eligible

Observers noted, however, that more than 900 male officers are now being considered for promotion to commander and that they all come from the Classes of 1941-42, whereas the 19 women who are eligible were first commissioned in 1942.

They also point out that the Integration Act was written into law to provide career opportunities for women in the Service and that it purposely was not related to promotion laws for male officers except where it "does not conflict."

Senior male officers, they point out, are guaranteed a specific number of years of service while Wave officers must retire at the age of 50 in the rank of lieutenant commander and at 55 in the rank of commander regardless of their total service.

They note also that the Integration law specifically states that "women officers shall be excluded from any computations" which are made within the Navy to determine male promotions.

Washington Star Sees Economy in Career Incentives

Commenting on General Matthew B. Ridgway's remarks on the need for better incentives for Service careers, the Evening Star, Washington, D. C., this week said editorially:

"Why individuals who couldn't lead a platoon around a corner like to make a career out of sneering at 'the brass' is a little hard to understand. Nevertheless, it is a popular American pastime, and now that the fighting in Korea is over there is apt to be more rather than less of it. This tendency to deride military leaders—many of them men whose outstanding competence would bring much higher rewards in private industry—is only one of the things, however, which contribute to sagging morale. Another is the chipping away in the name of economy at the so-called fringe benefits which have traditionally been looked upon as a partial offset to the relatively low pay scales in the services.

"This is a factor which assumes increasing importance as modern weapons and modern strategy demand the services of more and more highly trained men in the armed forces. It costs many thousands of dollars to train one of these spe-

Sec. Dulles Sounds Timely Warning

IN his speech before the American Legion convention on Wednesday, widely applauded as a forceful and much needed expression of American foreign policy, Secretary of State Dulles gave warning that Red China must not send troops into Indo-China. Specifically, he added, "a second aggression could not occur without grave consequences which might not be confined to Indo-China," and the Reds would no longer be able to count upon their privileged sanctuary north of the Yalu river.

This was a most timely utterance. It was in effect a report to the outside world, as well as the St. Louis audience, on American determination to stand firmly on the ground taken some weeks ago by President Eisenhower, in declaring that the Korean armistice "would be a fraud if it merely released Communist forces for attack elsewhere." It was a warning, too, against any Red intentions to resort to mere talk as a means of delaying a true peace in Korea. Mr. Dulles cited Communism's "long record of negotiations dragged out in order to give the Communists a cover for achieving ulterior purposes"—such as the 374 futile meetings in quest of an Austrian treaty, the 109 days of repetitious and futile talk about the agenda of a German peace conference which also never came off, the two years of negotiation in Korea itself. Finally he gave assurance that America's aim in Korea remains what it was, a united Korea for free Koreans. He promised that if the coming talks drag on for more than three months "we shall pause to take stock of the situation," and will consult with the Republic of Korea and other Allies on the step next to be taken. Mr. Dulles' speech did not come too soon. Its effect should be admirable.

THE FUTURE of the European Defense Community is dependent upon a good many events, but upon none more markedly than upon the West German elections of this weekend. Chancellor Adenauer is the uncompromising supporter of that Community, and upon German military contributions to the European Army which would make the EDC effective. Moscow has gone to great pains to help the opposition, by encouraging both to German Reds and the obnoxious Neo Nazis. Thus in the past fortnight Moscow has slipped over the border from East Germany literally thousands of thugs who are instructed to keep Christian Socialist coalition voters away from the polls and reduce the Chancellor's support if they cannot beat it altogether. The Bonn police had arrested over 7,000 of them at midweek, and gladly accepted as volunteer assistants a number of Youth Group members for Sunday patrol. Herr Adenauer's closing speeches to the electorate have exploited the circumstance as evidencing Russia's aim to block effective German participation in that European union which is the most promising of all barriers to Red conquest. Monday's report of West Germany's vote will be awaited with enormous interest throughout the west; EDC has a great many other needs, but none matters a great deal if West Germany's full support is denied.

REPORTS from TRUST, where Maj. Gen. B. M. McFadyen has the U. S. Troops command, have taken on new interest in the past week, with Italy and Yugoslavia equally concerned over the future of Trieste's Zone B. The United States, whose contributions of military and economic aid are essential to both states, is in a position to afford substantial guidance to them, but the situation is potentially explosive. Yugoslavia now seeks not only complete control of Zone B, but of additional Italian territory where the population is largely Slovene. To cope with what might be more than a merely oral threat, Italy has sent troops into Trieste's Zone A. The Anglo-American occupational forces are few, but up to now have been able to block hostilities by their obvious state of readiness for action.

MARSHAL JUIN, in his new role as commander-in-chief of SACEUR's Central Sector (immediately under General Gruenther so far as that important area is concerned) this past week made a blunt declaration—that the planning of his activities calls for a great deal more information on atomic weapons than thus far has been vouchsafed by the United States. It is not clear just what he expects, for the present American policy, in effect now for several months, is to provide a selected number of NATO personnel with systematic instruction in the tactics and organization which we ourselves are developing as a result of the tests at Nevada Proving Ground. Marshal Juin says explicitly that he is not seeking for allied commanders any instruction in our manufacturing secrets, but only a knowledge of what the new weapons will do and the methods of exploiting them—plus a knowledge of how many will be at allied disposal, and when.

This expression by the French marshal is hardly a surprise; the main surprise is that it is so long delayed, for the rapid development of atomic weapons in the United States and other countries has made apparent the importance of information about their employment (if nothing more) on the part of other nations, for defensive as well as offensive purposes. It was to cope with this requirement that the United States began some months ago in Germany the brief courses of instruction for selected U. S. and NATO personnel in the tactical uses of various nuclear weapons and in the defense against them. Apparently Marshal Juin wants more information than is being given, or wider dispersion of it, but any progress in that direction will call for agreement by the AEC and by Congress itself.

THE SUEZ PROSPECT, a dark one last month, seems to be brightening somewhat as a result of General Sir Brian Robertson's informal and unpublicized negotiations with representatives of the Egyptian foreign office. This is good news, and timely, not only for Egypt and Great Britain as principals in the controversy but for the West generally. Suez installations constitute a base of very great importance, far outreaching the defense of the canal itself. It is apparent that a secure base at that point, accessible from both west and east, could have a most important relationship to military defense of Turkey and Iran. Its security is of interest to Egypt and the Arab states as well, and always has been, but the increasing nationalistic spirit of the Egyptians and the Arab League has tended to blind them to the fact that they alone are today unable to operate any such installation effectively. Apparently the Egyptians have belatedly come around to that realization and (thanks in some measure to the non-public character of their negotiations) appear to have reached partial agreement with Britain. One gathers from an unofficial report that an Egyptian will be formally named "commander" of the base, but that a British deputy (modestly designated as "technical supervisor") will receive his orders from London, and that some 4,000 British technicians will continue to maintain the base until such time (unestimated) as the Egyptians can be trained to take over such duties. The British garrison, also, is scheduled to remain for a year and a half. These are very considerable points of agreement. The large differences are still unsettled (notably the base's availability to western nations at need) but progress made by Sir Brian is encouraging.

ADMIRAL WILLIAM M. FECHTER, USN (center), is greeted on his arrival in Naples to assume his new post as Commander-in-Chief of Allied Forces in Southern Europe. Welcoming the new Southern NATO Commander is Maj. Gen. Umberto Fiori (left), Italian Air Force, who represented Italy's Armed Forces, and Lt. Gen. David M. Schlatter, USAF, Commander, Allied Air Forces, Southern Europe.

A NEW MEDICAL OFFICER CUT is being studied at the Pentagon. It will be pushed by the American Medical Assn., resisted by the Surgeons General. Ratio of doctors to troops already is slated to drop from 3.6 to 3 per thousand by next 1 July. In connection with FY '55 budget planning, this ratio is undergoing re-evaluation. Should a decision be made to reduce medical strength further, it's a certainty family care will suffer. Meantime, at Scott AFB, Ill., headquarters of the Air Training Command, orthopedic treatment for dependents, except for emergencies, was eliminated this week—another instance of curtailed medical care for Service families.

OVERSEA COMMISSARIES are not threatened directly by the Appropriations Rider which may close many ZI stores. However, price boosts have hit commissaries abroad. In Europe, for example, cost of government-baked bread went up 5 (correct-five-) cents per pound on 1 Sept. The hike was ordered by Washington.

GENERAL RIDGWAY has summoned Army ZI commanders to a special conference at the Pentagon next week. Normally, Army Commanders assemble at Washington twice a year—invariably in June and late November. The new CofS wants to have the latest ideas of leaders in the field and, in turn, will give them his slant on current problems. In preparation for these sessions, the former NATO commander has been briefed at a brisk pace during the past week by D/A staff officers.

USMC LT. COLS. are going to get a break. The first board in 2 years to name officers for promotion to colonel will be convened on or about 24 Sept.

THE JCS DEFENSE REVIEW will be followed by fast budget action at the Pentagon. Lower echelon "working hands" are standing by, awaiting appropriate instructions and directives from the Defense level before they can begin to translate defense objectives into dollar costs. Guideposts won't be set out, however, until the JCS recommendations are received and reviewed. Chances are the JCS determinations will not be submitted in a single package. As reviews are completed in specific areas, findings will be submitted to SecDef Wilson so that budget planning can be accelerated.

SEVERAL SCORE COLLEGES will be washed out of the Air Force ROTC program completely unless the Defense Department relaxes some of the current manpower restrictions. Elimination of thousands of students from the AF ROTC program as individuals will be followed by early cancellation of unit contracts with many civilian colleges and universities if current policies aren't changed. Top AF officials are hopeful they will not have to break contracts, some of them made since Korea at the urging of the Pentagon. It's a hot potato which Asst. SecDef Hannah, back from the Far East, must handle in a hurry.

TIMELY INTELLIGENCE this week as thermometer readings soared throughout most of the nation was the disclosure that Army Ordnance scientists already are making tentative plans for a symposium to be held in Washington, D. C., next year. The subject: "Temperature—Concept, Attainment and Measurement." The conference will avoid the heat; it's scheduled for the fall.

THE DEFENSE DEPT. DODGED—temporarily at least—the problem of what to do about scores of thousands of men leaving active duty after 2 years service, who have a 6-year reserve obligation. Heavy pressure was exerted by reserve leaders for an involuntary assignment program, particularly in view of the requirement that Army Reserve units reach minimum strengths by 30 Sept. or face deactivation. The proposal is packed with dynamite. It's obvious the Pentagon would like Congress to get in the Act and spell out the ground rules more explicitly—possibly to the extent of prescribing specific punishment for non compliance. To get off the hook for the present, the Army neatly extended to 31 March 1954 the "maintenance status" date for all Reserve units activated before 1 July 1953. Those organized after that date have 9 months to obtain minimum strengths.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS to Army installations may have six 4x5 photographs per visit without charge, according to a new regulation. They must pay for additional prints. The Army order adds that the "number of photographs taken will be kept to the absolute minimum necessary for official purposes." It is not likely that the public coffers will be greatly enlarged at the end of any year as a result of the sale of prints to distinguished visitors.

THERE'S OBVIOUS CONFUSION in Air Force quarters as to whether or not the elimination of some 6500 officers will catch some pilots. Asst. Sec'y White released a statement this week which said pilots would not be eliminated. However, there are persistent reports that among the 6500 who will be "rified" before winter, as many as two-fifths are rated officers, including pilots.

THE SERVICE JAGS are anxious to learn what new ideas Defense Dept. General Counsel H. Struve Hensel may have about their activities. There are some at the Pentagon who want to restrict duties of military legal specialists to matters of military justice and to turn over to civilian lawyers many functions now performed by the judge advocates. Mr. Hensel has been given broadly defined authority in his new post and his recommendations on this and other problems will carry heavy weight.

THERE'S NOTHING SPECIAL in the assignment of 2d Lt. James T. Johnson of the MCAS, Cherry Point, N. C., to the Marine Corps Officer Candidate Basic School at Quantico, Va., except that he previously spent five months at the school as an instructor—with the rank of private first class.

THE RED CROSS is worried about effects of false rumors that it has been selling everything from cigarettes to blood. To get the facts straight, thousands of posters are being distributed to military installations. The posters emphasize that Red Cross services and supplies for servicemen and their families are not sold and call upon military personnel to report instantly any instances where fast operators ask for pay in connection with Red Cross help.

THE HOT WEATHER has rocketed loss of soda pop bottles at military bases. It's a logistics problem which is giving serious trouble. At Carswell AFB, Tex., a mere 65,700 empties went AWOL during the last three months.

Chief Takes New Post

A WWII Air Force lieutenant colonel, Andrew H. Berding, Defense Department Director of Information since July 1952, will become Assistant Director for Policy and Programs of the new U. S. Information Agency on 21 Sept.

His appointment was announced this week by Theodore C. Streibert, USIA director.

Mr. Berding will head an office which was created following merger of the Office of Policies and Plans and Office of Field Programs.

He will be responsible for development of information policies, plans and programs which "will most effectively further U. S. objectives abroad," said Mr. Streibert.

Lieutenant Colonel Berding served in 1948 as head of the Information Division of the Economic Cooperation Administration in Italy, and as Director of Information for Defense Mobilization and as Director of Information for the Mutual Security Agency before coming to the Pentagon last year.

He is a veteran of 13 years service with the Associated Press—most of it spent in Europe—including five years as bureau chief in Rome.

Col. McCrary, SCTC C of SC

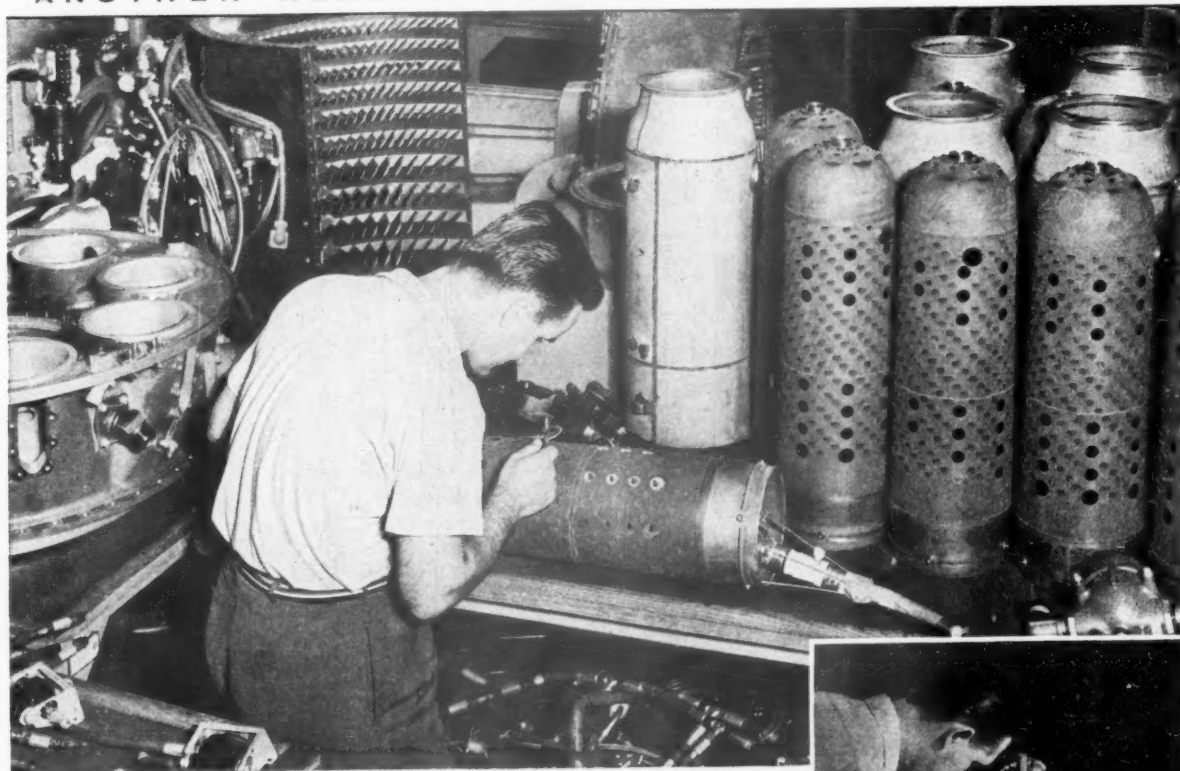

Col. Arthur A. McCrary, a U. S. Representative at the NATO planning meetings for 1953, has been appointed chief of staff of the Signal Corps Training Center at Camp Gordon, Ga.

He replaced Col. Harold A. Buck, who became commanding officer of the Signal Corps Replacement Training Center in June. Lt. Col. Dulaney L. O'Rourke, acting chief of staff in the interim period, has left for Command and General Staff School, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

Colonel and Mrs. McCrary, and their three children live at 3005 Cardinal Drive, Augusta, Ga. Twin sons Arthur A., jr., and James C., jr., 18, will attend the Virginia Military Institute this fall. Dorothy, 12, will begin junior high school at Mt. St. Joseph Convent School in Augusta.

ANOTHER REASON ALLISON LEADS IN THE AIR

Inspector uses sealed beam spotlight and magnifying glass for visual check of inner combustion chamber.

The sky's the limit on our tests

In the never-ending search for higher standards of jet performance, for improved materials and increased endurance, Allison engineers keep putting jets through their paces under every conceivable flight condition—even to altitudes above 45,000 feet.*

Then, as the picture above shows, they completely disassemble the engine for a detailed inspection of every part. The parts you see here are from an experimental model of a J35 engine that recently completed an altitude test well above the 45,000-foot mark. Some 3,500 parts are spread out on tables for examination. Tests go far beyond mere visual scrutiny and usually include fluorescent-penetrant, magnetic-particle and dye-penetrant inspections, as well as X-rays in some instances. No part is too small to be checked. And constant improvements are being made in our inspection procedures to be sure that no flaws or breakdowns in any piece escape detection.

Yes, the sky's the limit on our tests. And this thoroughness of inspection—in both experimental development and production engines—pays off in the greater dependability for which Allison engines are famous.

*Security restrictions do not permit identification of the actual altitude reached.

Machine Operation
30,000 hours

All these elements add up to just one anti-aircraft unit! An aircraft carrier requires a battery of 20 to provide the principal protective cover from air attack.

American Machine & Foundry Company produces certain component mechanisms that perform a critical role in the operation of these anti-aircraft units. Here again, by working closely with the Naval Bureau of Ordnance, AMF's engineering ability and manufacturing facilities help to supply the answer to a vital need.

This is only one example of the job American industry is doing to insure effective military preparedness. Only by producing better products faster through individual speed and skill can we keep our nation militarily alert.

Above figures given with due regard for security.

Following is a digest of decision 116453 of the Comptroller General made in the case of Col. Paul A. Jaccard who presented a voucher for the travel from San Antonio, Tex., to San Francisco, Calif.:

"The Career Compensation Act of 1949 and the regulations issued pursuant thereto entitle a member of the Armed Forces ordered to make a permanent change of station to be furnished transportation for all eligible dependents and therefore, where an Army officer has dependents in such numbers that when traveling at the same time between the same points all cannot travel by privately owned conveyance and some necessarily travel by common carrier on transportation requests, said officer may be reimbursed for dependent travel performed by private conveyance without reference to the value of the transportation in kind furnished for the others."

Explaining the decision, the Comptroller stated:

"The officer was transferred from Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., to Far East Command, Yokohama, Japan, for duty. By travel authorization dated 23 Mar. 1953 his dependents (wife and seven children) were authorized upon call of the port commander to proceed from San Antonio to the Port of Debarkation for further movement by water transportation to Yokohama. Three dependents (ages 18, 17, and 5 years, respectively) were issued transportation requests and traveled by rail from San Antonio to San Francisco at Government expense. Five dependents (wife and four children, ages 4, 10, 13, and 16 years, respectively), traveled between the same points by privately owned automobile, at personal expense."

"It is clearly the intent of the statute and of the regulations issued pursuant thereto that an officer ordered to make a permanent change of station shall be furnished transportation for all eligible dependents regardless of numbers. Hence, where an officer, as in this case, has dependents in such numbers that even when traveling at the same time between the same points all cannot travel by privately owned conveyance, and some necessarily travel by common carrier on transportation requests, no reason is perceived why the officer should not be reimbursed for dependent travel performed by private conveyance computed without reference to the value of the transportation in kind furnished for the remaining dependents."

"Accordingly, the voucher and supporting papers are returned herewith, payment thereon being authorized, if otherwise correct."

PIO Pastor

■ FT. TOTTEN, N. Y. Capt. George C. Whitney, public information officer here since March, 1952, will revert to inactive reserve status on 7 Sept. to resume studies for the ministry.

He will enroll at the Andover-Newton Theological School in Newton Center, Mass., which he left in 1935 to enter newspaper work on the Lawrence, (Mass.) Telegraph and later on Greenfield, (Mass.) Recorder-Gazette.

While studying he will occupy the full-time pastorate of the Congregational Parish (Unitarian) in Norton, Mass.

■ EGLIN AFB, FLA. The Officers' Wives Garden Club met 17 Aug at the Officers' Club for an enlightening lesson in flower arranging. A short business meeting preceded the program with Mrs. Walter Putnam reading the collate and Mrs. Bert W. Marshall, the constitution. Mrs. Ralph Carter announced that Mrs. Patrick W. Timberlake had chosen the symbols of the Garden Club: the flower—camellia; the tree—magnolia; the colors—Air Force blue and gold.

Mrs. Charles R. Johnson, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Howard Heinecke of Val Paraiso, who gave helpful hints on planting in August and on protecting bulbs and cuttings through the colder months.

Mrs. Patrick W. Timberlake was hostess to the charter members of the Eglin Officers' Wives Garden Club at a delightful tea at her home at Camp Pinchot on 14 Aug. Mrs. Walter B. Putnam honored Mrs. Timberlake with the first membership card of the newly formed Garden Club.

In authentic Japanese dress, Mrs. Amyko Repko presented her hostess a beautiful Japanese arrangement of yellow chrysanthemums, coxcomb, and greens.

The guests enjoyed party sandwiches and iced tea on the spacious porch of the Timberlake's quarters. Those present included: Mesdames Charles R. Johnson, Edward P. Mechlign, Dewitt R. Searles, James D. Patton, Wm. C. Winter, Jr., Walter B. Putnam, Emile A. Reed, Amyko Repko, Gordon E. Baker, Robert H. Allyn, Ralph Carter, Bert W. Marshall, Joseph B. Stanley, David B. Smith. Two charter members Mrs. Daniel S. Campbell and Mrs. Wm. G. Hudson were unable to attend.

New Post for Army Dietitian

Maj. Barbara M. Ryan, has reported for duty with the Medical Plans and Operations Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General, as a replacement for Maj. Helen Davis, recently assigned to the Food Service Division, U. S. Army Hospital, Fort Bragg, N. C.

An Army dietitian, Major Ryan will be stationed in the Food Service Section of the Division and will also serve as assistant to Lt. Col. Hilda M. Lovett, Chief of the Dietitian Section, Women's Medical Specialist Corps.

Computation Of Retired Pay

The Comptroller General has ruled as follows, in decision 114649, in regard to rescinding a Pay Election Computation:

"An Army officer who retired subsequent to 1 Oct. 1949, the effective date of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, and who, under section 415 of that act elected to receive disability retirement pay computed under the laws in effect on 30 Sept. 1949 may now rescind his prior election and become entitled to retirement pay computed under the laws in effect at the time of his retirement, as if the said prior election had never been made."

Draft—Not Bars—Likely For Some ROTC Graduates

Almost two years in advance, the Army gave notice this week that some ROTC students who graduate in 1955 may not be commissioned because of lack of vacancies. This would make them eligible for the draft.

The Army said also that no assurance can be given these graduates that they will be commissioned in the branch of their choice.

Furthermore, the Army stated that enrollments in the Transportation, Military Police and Quartermaster Corps ROTC units for the 1953-1954 school year "will be somewhat restricted because of existing excess numbers of officers in these branches."

The Army, looking to the future, said that the number of ROTC graduates who will be commissioned in 1955 will depend upon the number of officer vacancies existing in the "active Army" at that time.

Every effort will be made, the Army said, to commission and call to active duty all graduates of the 1953-54 school year who qualify for a commission.

In order to control the 1954 officer production, transfers from the Air Force ROTC program to the final year of the advanced course (Military Science IV) of Army ROTC will be stringently limited. Only specially qualified, highly motivated volunteers for the combat arms, including the Corps of Engineers and Signal Corps, who, preferably, are pursuing a course leading to an Engineering degree, may be enrolled in the last year of the advanced course from among those students who are not continued in the final year of the Air Force program.

Automatic Bearing Check

An automatic electronic temperature-monitoring system designed to eliminate engine shutdowns due to bearing "burn-outs" has been developed for the U. S. Navy, it was announced this week by the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company.

A prototype of this scanning system is being built for use on the 59,000-ton, $218-million carrier, USS Forrestal.

Heart of the automatic system is an electronic scanning instrument capable of checking temperatures in 40 critical locations (usually in the turbine areas) in 10 seconds. If the scanner detects an unsafe temperature at any point, an alarm sounds and a light glows on the instrument face pinpointing the trouble spot. Under present procedures a seaman either makes scheduled in-person checks of bearing thermometers—a time-consuming job and subject to the possibility of human error—or interprets data on recording instruments to determine temperature conditions.

BuAer Has "Electrical Brain"

An eight-ton electronic computer is being installed at the Bureau of Aeronautics, Main Navy Building, Washington, D. C.

Manufactured by the Computer Research Corp. of California, the computer is capable of performing a multiplication or division in 15 thousandths of a second, which is twenty times faster than the blink of a human eye. It can add and subtract at even faster speeds.

Contract for the computer was let in November 1951 as the result of an investigation which led to a faster, more efficient and more reliable method of tabulating and computing problems of jet-age sciences.

John W. Myers Honored By Night Fighter Group

John W. Myers, vice-president of Northrop Aircraft, Inc., was honored for his contributions to the development of night and all-weather military airplanes and tactics at the annual meeting of the Night Fighter Association held 22 Aug. in Washington, D. C., in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Air Force Association.

Mr. Myers received the Association's first special service award for his work with Black Widow P-61s during World War II.

The Night Fighter Association is composed of approximately 600 individuals who were associated with night fighter units during World War II or have seen service with all-weather airplanes. Officers of the group are: Brig. Gen. W. W. Kratz (Ret.), president; Maj. R. O. Steward, USAF, vice-president; Phillip Horrigan, Hughes Aircraft, secretary; and Gil Nettleton, Northrop Aircraft, Inc., treasurer.

Army Cushions Freight

Safer and more economical shipment of military cargo by truck and rail may be achieved by a new type pneumatic dunnage developed by the Army Quartermaster Corps in cooperation with industry, the Department of the Army has announced.

In addition to minimizing possible damage to supplies while in transit, the experimental dunnage may result in important savings in dockside time and the labor and lumber used in conventional shoring systems. Another advantage is that the new dunnage may be reused indefinitely.

The dunnage is a rectangular pillow-shaped envelope, approximately 36" x 72" x 12", made of a gas-tight fabric which, when deflated, is placed in the spaces left by the variation in shape of the items being shipped. After the "pillow" is in place, it is inflated to six or eight pounds of air pressure causing it to expand, thereby holding the cargo in place during the movement of the train or truck.

Prototypes are now being fabricated under an Army Quartermaster Corps contract.

Speed Shell Production

The Berwick, Pa., plant of the American Car and Foundry Company has turned out 8-inch howitzer shells in one-third the time normally required to complete the finished product.

The plant produced in four months shells which the Philadelphia Ordnance District did not expect to be delivered for 12 months.

A contract for the shells was awarded last January. The POD said the projectiles were badly needed in Korea and for stockpiling, and said it hoped the first batch could be delivered by Christmas. Instead, the first shells were ready by last May.

Col. Walter M. Tisdale, chief of the POD, said: "A.C.F. has justified the confidence placed in it by the Philadelphia Ordnance District in delivering 8-inch shells far ahead of the most hoped-for schedules."

Officials credited the record-breaking deliveries to an awareness on both sides of the urgent need for the shells, and the close cooperation between the ACF and the POD.

C-54 Overhaul Award

A $5-million contract for the modification and overhaul of an undisclosed number of C-54 planes has been awarded the Pacific Airmotive Corporation.

According to Thomas Wolfe, president, PAC and the Air Force have reduced overhaul costs per airplane approximately 43.1 per cent since the start of the program. PAC is the only private maintenance company currently engaged in C-54 reconditioning work.

This is the fourth contract for similar work awarded to PAC since 1950. After the planes have been repaired, they will be delivered to Military Air Transport Service, Alaskan Air Command, the Far Eastern Air Forces and Troop Carrier Command.

Navy Promotes Small Business Interests

Prospects for smaller firms to participate in prime Navy contracts will continue good during fiscal 1954, Assistant Secretary of the Navy R. H. Fogler, said in releasing fiscal 1953 year-end Navy small business figures.

He announced that of all Navy procurement, including major defense weapons, small business received $1,300,000,000. An additional $1,100,000,000 was subcontracted by large Navy defense contractors to small business making a total of approximately $2,500,000,000 going to that segment of industry.

Secretary Fogler also noted that over the past two years the amount of suitable business awarded to small firms has increased to 78 from 73 per cent.

The Navy said a greater effort is being made to advise small business of forthcoming Navy procurement. The Industry Cooperation officers in the 13 Small Business Administration regions have worked closely with the organizations and its predecessor, The Small Defense Plants Administration, to help small business with procurement and production problems.

Finally, Small Business Specialists have screened old bidder lists to remove inactive bidders and add the names of new potential suppliers who want to contribute to the defense effort.

Col. Pryor Joins Firm

Lt. Col. John R. Pryor, who retired 31 Jan. 1952, with a 40% permanent physical disability and after more than 34 years of active duty in the Army, and who was recently transferred to the retired reserve list due to physical disqualifications, has recently become associated with Phil Hawkes, Realtor, 10192 Chapman Avenue, Garden Grove, Calif.

Colonel Pryor's last active duty station was Camp Stoneman, Calif., where he was Executive Officer for the Overseas Replacement Battalion. Since retirement Col. Pryor has resided at 13281 La Vaughn Drive, Garden Grove, Calif., with his wife Hortense Pryor and daughter Audie Pryor.

cialists, and there certainly is no real economy in cutting back on such things as commissaries and dental care for dependents when the result is to discourage men from making a career of military service. The cost of training one new man can wipe out the false economy in a dozen such cases, and this is something which should be recognized. In the long run, our best hope of true economy in this field lies in inducing competent people to make their careers in the specialist branches of the defense establishment."

New System of Controls

Col. H. Shachtman, director of depot supply and services at Middletown AFD, Pa., has developed a system of controls which is estimated to have saved more than $1½-million in the past nine months.

The controls consist of 88 charts covering every function and phase of supply. Standards of production for each major function were established by this system on the basis of the best three months of the previous six months' output.

DEATH

Crocker, Howard L., USCG (Ret), 12 Aug 1953.

Honor Col. Richard Strong

A group of Philippine government officials has contributed a fund to the Harvard School of Public Health in memory of the late Col. Richard Pearson Strong, who was responsible for greatly improved health conditions in the Philippine Islands in the latter part of the 19th Century.

The gift was presented to Brig. Gen. James S. Simmons, USA-Ret., Dean of the Harvard School of Public Health, by Dr. Juan Salcedo, jr., Secretary of the Department of Health in Manila and President of the World Health Assembly in 1952.

Colonel Strong was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps in 1898 and was sent to the Philippines during the Spanish-American War. He became the first president of the Army Medical Research Board which was established for the study of tropical diseases, and discovered the dysentery bacillus which bears his name. He returned to the United States in 1913 and became professor of Tropical Medicine at Harvard, a position which he held until 1938. During WWII, he was on duty with the Army as a colonel in charge of training in tropical medicine.

Col. Alenius ERDL Asst.

Col. E. M. J. Alenius, a veteran of WWII service in the Pacific with the 81st Infantry Division, was assigned this week as Assistant Commanding Officer of the Army's Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Ft. Belvoir, Va. He replaced Col. Desloge Brown, who left recently for assignment in Europe.

Colonel Alenius served as Chief of the Aviation Engineer Section and Director of Operations with Air Force Headquarters just prior to his new assignment.
